

When the world is full,

people will take me,
that which is mine,
and all I have done,

and chop them up into little bits and redistribute them.

And then the world will still be full.

